Edward Abram Development CEO

Edward Abram, is a minority leader who proudly represents the minority community. A native of Oakland, California where he attended Dominican University of California on a basketball scholarship earning a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science Degree. He furthered his education by attending Holy Names University, obtaining a Master's Degree in Education.

In 2020, he partnered with a Japanese Technology Billionaire named Norio Ichihasi, and Co-Founder of Mobileye which developed the autonomous driverless software. His company was purchased by Intel in 2017 for $15.3 Billion. This transaction is believed to be the largest acquisition recorded in Israel's history.

He is the proud Founder and CEO of EA Innovations LLC. (EAI) A Los Angeles-based, minority-owned, global technology corporation. This developing company has partnered with innovative conglomerates, embracing evolving technologies producing artificial intelligence (AI) that manufactures and distributes engineered pathogen control devices that provide state-of-the-art safety and security protocols made right here in the good 'ol USA. EAI has fostered strategic partnerships with native American leaders to improve the commonwealth with sustainable solutions through Smart Cities programs that incorporate innovation to help the communities with resources that are necessary for today's society as it relates to fresh and safe water supply, clean air, net zero and net positive energy solutions, healthy foods (pesticide free) to improve the mental health of our young society that will someday become formidable leaders.

EA Innovations has also partnered with other exciting innovative companies as an authorized distributor of products and technology that include a self-sustainable, IoT driven light pole built to reduce the threat of gun violence, a unique intelligent electric vehicle manufacturer with advanced, built-in safety features unlike any other vehicle in existence today which is expected to be introduced into the global marketplace.